- DO2 is supranormal in septic shock mainly as a result of the elevated cardiac output
- VO2 is also raised due to an increase in tissue metabolic activity
- Supply dependency is observed over a wider range of DO2 values than usual
- Sepsis-induced mitochondrial dysfunction may prevent oxygen utilisation at a cellular level